Shop and Support Local this Holiday Season

Hope you're feeling merry and bright on this sunny 50-degree December morning! On the other hand, maybe this unseasonably warm weather resulting in dangerous storms has you feeling blue this Christmas. Well, we're writing to remind you that even the little things you do can make a big difference. Shopping local, for one can help minimize our direct impact on climate change through:

- Reducing fossil fuels, otherwise necessary for importing/shipping
- Reducing packaging and containers
- Circulating money in the local economy, rather than in the pockets of billionaires
- Encouraging production of sustainably produced and high-quality goods

All of this in turn creates a more resilient community, one where we can withstand a negative experience like a tornado or a global pandemic; one where we can depend on our neighbors, and ask favors, and give gifts.

If you're still looking for gifts this season, consider supporting your neighbors by giving something sustainable and unique this season. Our local growers and makers are waiting for you! Also, consider your timing - there are fewer supply chain issues when you buy local! Here are a few ideas:
