Concerned about recent cyclospora headlines? Our lettuce comes from three nearby growers: Broadview Farm and Gardens in Marengo, Tribe Country Farms in Woodstock, and Gotham Greens in Chicago. Tribe and Gotham Greens grow indoors in controlled environments that help limit exposure to some conditions affecting large field-grown operations. Broadview Farms owner Tim told us, "we would never grow or sell anything we would not feed to our own family."

With fewer miles, facilities and handling steps between grower and shelf, shorter supply chains offer greater freshness, transparency and traceability. No fresh food is completely risk-free—but knowing how, where and by whom it was grown matters.

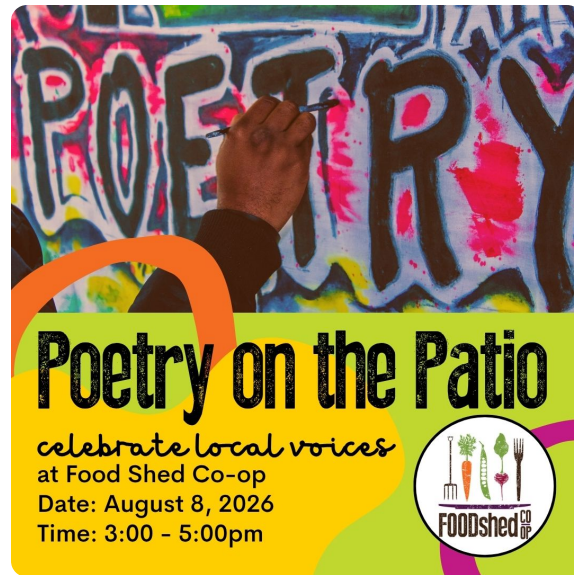

This is our mission in action: championing healthy, ethical and resilient food choices while strengthening our local economy and helping our community make better-informed food choices.

Become an Owner & help us reach financial stability

For a one-time $200 household investment, you join more than 2,700 neighbors working to build a more local, transparent and resilient food network.

This week, headlines are focused on cyclospora. Before that, it was avian flu, egg shortages and remember disruptions at large meat-processing plants. These recurring challenges reveal how vulnerable long, complex supply chains can be—and provide a powerful reason to invest in a community-owned alternative.

You don't have to be an owner to shop for the good food we offer. But when you join, you help strengthen local farms and food businesses, improve transparency and build a food system better prepared to nourish our community when larger systems struggle. And, you get discounts!
